ATTORNEY WAS NOT "OLIVER"

NEW YORK, March 29.—A sensational climax came in the suit of Miss Rae Tanzer against Attorney James W. Osborne for $50,000 for alleged breach of promise this afternoon at the office of United States District Attorney Marshall.

After the District Attorney had received a statement from Miss Tanzer he announced that she had repudiated her identification of Mr. Osborne as the "Oliver Osborne" who had wooed her.

At the conference there were a number of other persons, including Attorney Harold Spielberg, who had been retained by Miss Tanzer as her new counsel earlier in the day.

Attorney Spielberg and the others present were witnesses to Miss Tan-

Medea Sunk After Full Examination

AMSTERDAM, March 29.—Indignation throughout Holland over the sinking of the Dutch steamship Medea by a German submarine was increased today when it was learned that the Medea had been sent to the bottom after the commander of the underwater craft had made a full examination of the ship's papers. This information was secured upon the arrival of the Medea's crew at Amsterdam.

HAWTHORNE TELLS HOW OLD-TIME HARVARD MEN OUT-HIKED THE RED SOX

Written Exclusively for the Boston American.
By JULIAN HAWTHORNE.

HOT SPRINGS, Ark., March 29.—A chill fell upon the sunny South last week, and the Red Sox were prevented from wreaking their feelings upon the ball, and were thrown to some extent upon their personal resources to pass the time. A ball player in the practice season thinks he would like to take a day off now and then, but when the weather makes the day off compulsory, he discovers that the only thing he really cares to do is to play ball. And the manager, who knows his duty and does it on the ball field, is perplexed by the problem how best to handle thirty or forty active young gentleman out of their job.

They sat in serried chairs in the hotel lobby and talked; they grouped themselves about the lobby card tables and played hearts, or watched somebody else do it; they lounged up to the cigar counter and gambled for a prize gripsack or an Ingersoll watch, exchanging thoughts and sentiments meanwhile with the pretty young ladies presiding there; they read the newspapers, advertisements and all; they stood up in rings, smoking cigars, twiddling their watchcharms and chaffing one another; they took

MARTIAL LAW FOR ITALY ON APRIL 1

PARIS, March 29.—According to the Rome correspondent of the Petit Parisien, Austria has definitely agreed to cede part of the province of Trent to Italy as the price of continued Italian neutrality. It is understood that the Italian government has not yet replied to the proposal.

ROME, March 29.—Martial law will go into effect throughout Italy on April 1. While no formal proclamation may be issued, the military establishment will take over all telegraph and telephone lines and the railroads.

After midnight on March 31 no information relating to the movements of the Italian navy or army may be transmitted. This rigorous censorship has been ordered by a royal decree.

While the decree covers only the period up to July 30, it will be extended at that time to cover the entire period of the war.

This is one of Italy's final steps in its war plans. Mobilization orders will be the next. Those are expected at any moment.

Bavarian King Predicts Victory

AMSTERDAM, March 29.—During his visit to the western war theatre, King Ludwig of Bavaria delivered a patriotic address to the Bavarian troops, concluding thus:

HOME CIRCULATION PRODUCES RESULTS

MORE VICTIMS FOR GERMAN SUBMARINES

LONDON, March 29.—German submarines have claimed two more victims. The British steamship Aquila has been torpedoed and sunk off Bishops Islands, on the coast of Wales, and the West African mail steamer Falaba has been sunk off the mouth of Bristol Channel. The crew of the Aquila was saved.

It had been reported that the Falaba was attacked and torpedoed by a German undersea boat on Sunday, but it was not until today that this report was confirmed. The 148 persons on the Falaba were taken off in small boats, with the exception of eight, who were drowned.

The Aquila was attacked in St. George's Channel. The attack upon the Falaba also took place off the Welsh coast, but at a point south of the location of the destruction of the Aquila.

The Falaba left Liverpool on Saturday night and nothing further was heard of her until a wireless message was received stating that she was in distress at the mouth of Bristol Channel and that her passengers were being removed.

According to the Exchange Telegraph Company the Falaba was torpedoed before the passengers were able to take to the boat. The submarine stood by, the Exchange Telegraph correspondent declared, and made no effort to assist the persons who were floundering in the water. The captain was picked up dead, it was said.

Two German submarines are known to have been sunk by the Russians in the Baltic Sea and two others have probably been destroyed, according to a statement issued by the Russian Admiralty today at Petrograd.

JOHNSON SAYS WILLARD FIGHT IS HIS LAST

HAVANA, March 29.—Jack Johnson's fight with Jess Willard will be his last in defence of the world's heavyweight championship. The "Big Smoke" announced today that he would never fight again. He is going to retire without giving either Sam Langford or Sam McVey a battle. The claimants of the championship will be permitted to scramble for it without any interference from Johnson.

Just a few miles outside of Paris is a little farm upon which Johnson has set his eyes. He will buy it at the conclusion of the war and spend the rest of his life there.

The fight for the heavyweight championship of the world next Monday will develop into an Alphonse-Gaston affair for the first fifteen rounds, unless Johnson shifts from his famous defensive style of fighting or can force Willard to assume the offensive.

But there will be no frame-up. Reports that the fight was fixed were denied by Johnson today. "The fact that I did not go to Mexico ought to convince every one that I would not be a party to a 'frame-up,' said Johnson. "Had I gone to Mexico I would have arrived in poor shape and unable to make a good fight. My lack of condition and the limited time for training if the fight had been pulled off on the original date were the real reasons for my not going to Mexico. It was not the fear of being arrested."

Johnson and Willard are defensive fighters. They never carry the battle to their foe. They wait for the other fellow to come to them. Then they meet him and beat him back. Never has either been known to assume the aggressive, at least in the early fighting. Willard stated emphatically today that he would not rush Johnson.

"I'll lay back waiting for him if 'it takes twenty rounds to force him to come to me," said the big cowboy. "This isn't any hurry-up fight and my chances will increase with each passing round. This is something of an endurance contest, and I think that after twenty rounds or so Johnson will be winded and worn to a point where I can go in and beat him into unconsciousness.

"Those betting my friends can gamble on, and that is that I won't rush

SHOOT UP CLUB AT ROXBURY

Boston police officials today started a widespread search for the two New York gunmen who last night shot up the Cosmopolitan Club, No. 1969 Washington street, corner of Arnold street, Roxbury. A general alarm for their apprehension was sent throughout the country. A detailed description has been wired the New York authorities and efforts are being made in that city to locate them in their customary haunts.

Two men were shot by the gunmen. It is believed a gunmen's plot to hold up and rob the place originally caused the two men to visit the club, which is largely used by chauffeurs.

KNOWN TO THE POLICE.

One of the wounded men gave his name as William Gaylord, twenty-two, unmarried, living at No. 1188 Columbus avenue, but the police say he has been identified by them as "Cobbey" Maguire, well known to the policemen at headquarters as well as to those at the Roxbury Crossing Station.

He received a bullet in the right shoulder. It passed on, piercing both lungs, and is lodged somewhere in his body.

James McDonald, twenty, a chauffeur who lives with his mother at No. 4 Renfrew street, Roxbury, is the other victim of the shooting. He was shot twice, once in each thigh.

Shortly after 11 last night, according to Manager Martin's story to the police, a member of the club came in, accompanied by two strangers, whom he introduced as his friends and vouched for in the regular way. The two strangers had renewed the acquaintance of the club member who saw them, he said, at the Highland Hotel, Roxbury. The three men had first met in New York at the baseball games. All three were talking about a baseball player who is a mutual friend, and who had a near relative in the clubrooms at the time.

CLUB MANAGER'S STORY.

"I was suspicious of the two strangers from the first, because they

The bedspread was imported from France. It is made of French filet lace, woven in conventional design, with a conventionalised flower in the centre.

FORTS OF BOSPHORUS SHELLED

LONDON, March 29.—The defences of Constantinople on both sides are today under bombardment by the fleets of the Triple Entente.

While the great Anglo-French fleet is entering the Black Sea, the attack on the narrows of the Dardanelles, a powerful squadron of Russian battleships and cruisers is assailing the Bosphorus forts, only eighteen miles from the Turkish capital, according to dispatches from Petrograd and Constantinople.

After driving back into the straits the Turkish fleet that recently sallied forth, the Russian warships opened bombardment Saturday against the forts on both the European and Asiatic sides of the Bosphorus.

A large Turkish ship that was cut off in the Black Sea and later tried to make its way into the Bosphorus was sunk. This is believed to have been one of the vessels of the Turkish fleet, but the dispatches from the Russian naval commander have not yet identified it.

REPORT TURK SHIP SUNK.

The Russian fleet is believed to be continuing its bombardment of the Bosphorus today.

The official statement from Petrograd, describing the attack on the Bosphorus, follows:

"The Russian Black Sea fleet on Sunday bombarded the outside forts and batteries of the Bosphorus on both sides of the straits.

According to observations made from ships and hydroplanes our shells fell with exactitude. Russian aviators flying above the Bosphorus batteries dropped out successful bombs and dropped bombs with success.

"A heavy artillery fire was poured on the aviators by the enemy without success. The enemy's torpedo boats tried to come out, but were driven back into the straits by the fire of our guns.

"A large hostile four-masted ship trying to get into the Bosphorus from the sea was bombarded by us. She finally heeled over and blew up.

REJOICING IN PETROGRAD.

Rejoicing was caused in Petrograd by the news of the attack upon the Bosphorus and on all hands the hope was expressed that the Russian fleet would be able to force the straits before the Anglo-French fleet succeeded in smashing the Dardanelles forts.

The appearance of a Russian fleet before Stamboul and its capture of the Ottoman capital would gratify a national ambition that has existed since the days of Ivan.

Admiral Eberhard is in command of the Russian fleet in the Black Sea, and a dispatch from Odessa received today states that his flagship, the Imperatritza Maria, a battleship of 23,000 tons, led in the attack on the Bosphorus, being accompanied by the battleships Svyatoi, Evstafi, Ioann, Zlatoust, Panteleimon and Rotislav and the cruisers Pamyat, Merkuria and Kagul.

CONFIRMED BY TURKEY.

Official announcement of the opening of the Russian attack against the Bosphorus defences by the Russian Black Sea fleet was made today by the Turkish War Office at Constantinople. It was stated that the Russian ships bombarded the Turkish guard ships at long range and then drew off. The Turkish announcement follows:

"Early on Sunday morning our observation posts on the Bosphorus signalled the approach of some Russian warships, which shelled our guardships at long range and then quickly disappeared.

"A general bombardment of the Turkish forts on the Dardanelles was resumed on Sunday by the reinforced Anglo-French fleet. For more than five hours shells were hurled from the heavy guns of the international fleet against the Turkish forts on the Narrows. Some of the warships were at anchor in the Gulf of Saros off the southern coast of the peninsula of Gallipoli, while others entered by the western entrance of the strait.

FIRE FROM GULF OF SAROS.

The fresh attack against the Turkish forts during the operation of mine-sweepers on Saturday night that had penetrated as far as the mine field at Kilid Nahr at the southern entrance of the Narrows.

Details of the latest bombardment were received from Tenedos. Dispatches from these details stated that the cannonade was opened at 9 o'clock in the morning. The fire seemed to come from the Gulf of Saros and was very violent.

Dense volumes of smoke and earth rose high in the air as the cannonade proceeded. A thick pall, coming from bursting shells and burning forests hung over the heights of the peninsula of Gallipoli.

A heavy fire was directed against new defensive works which the Turks had erected at Kum Kale during the recent operations against the Dardanelles. For more than an hour clouds of smoke rolled upward at that point, indicating that the warships' shells had set fire to inflammable portion of the Turkish works.

FEAR F-4 WILL NEVER BE RAISED

HONOLULU, March 29.—Fears that the lost submarine F-4 would never be brought to the surface of the Pacific and remain on the ocean bottom, the tomb of twenty-one men, grew steadily here today, though there was no diminution in the efforts to raise the vessel.

Disappointed by the numerous announcements that the submarine had been located and was being raised further than the surface, officers of the men on board declined to accept the latest report that the F-4 had sighted and picked. They sharply criticised the naval officials today and asserted that daily reports of the activities of the vessel was responsible for the death of the men on board. It is probable that they will demand an official investigation.

The fleet of naval vessels hovers over the submarine's resting place. The dredge California is stripped for action as soon as chains have been fastened about the ill-fated craft. Mechanical difficulties are the present, as the submarine is down 200 feet. The world's record for a diver is 306 feet, held by Frank Crilley, set in the F-4 search, in 215 feet.

It is reported that Washington is making insistent calls for a report from Rear Admiral Moore and that these calls have gone unanswered for thirty-six hours. There is a growing belief here that the loss of the F-4 will develop into a naval scandal.

On Friday night Rear Admiral Moore officially notified the Navy Department at Washington that the F-4 had positively been located. The official dispatch on that day stated further that the vessel was being raised to a thirty-foot depth and was riding on an even keel.

On Saturday night it was sent the announcement that the F-4 had "collapsed the cable which had served for Navajo had around her, and settled back again to the bed of the ocean."

BELIEVED SHELL CRUSHED.

One report said that the F-4, while being towed, occasionally arose to the surface; another that she was "raised to a height of fifty feet from her position on the ocean's bed"; still another that she had "settled back into the lips of the crater of a volcano underneath the water."

The most remarkable report, however, was one sent early Sunday morning to the effect that "the periscope of the F-4 had been brought to the surface," and that "all energy was being redoubled in an effort to raise the submarine."

The reports told of "heart-breaking mishaps" in which "the cables slipped off the smooth plates."

Captain Roy Smith, commanding the submarine flotilla, was quoted as saying that "the constant stream of bubbles arising to the surface indicated that at least five of the compartments had given way."

WILL TRY DIVING BELL.

Portions of the F-4's superstructure have been brought to the surface. This would indicate the shell of the submarine has been crushed by the thousands of tons of water pressure and that no hope exists for the lives of the crew.

The object previously reported as being the F-4 has been discovered to be an old anchor, presumably lost by the battleship Oregon. A day was lost in trying to raise this.

W. C. Parks, a civil engineer, has started construction of his improved diving bell, a fifty four-inch cast iron pipe seven feet in height, fitted with plate glass peep holes. The diving bell is expected to be ready for use late today. Some experts fear it will not be strong enough to withstand the pressure.

TWO MEN SHOT IN ROXBURY CLUB

were not served with drinks and appeared to be carefully looking the place over all the time they were taking. They repeatedly asked to have an interview with me, but I was busy attending to the club members. They walked through the rooms of the club, inspecting them, and this excited my suspicions.

"I always keep a man stationed on the second floor above the street floor to see that nothing unlawful is taken up, and to guard against men concealing themselves in any of the unoccupied rooms. These two strangers repeatedly told me that they were going downstairs, and I think it was their design to get everybody on the lower floor, so their work in all the gambling tables and members to the street and then fire the cash register.

"There were about twenty-five members in the club at the time of the shooting, and I am surprised that several were not killed.

"On the second floor there is a big lounging room at the front of the building and a serving room in the rear. On the next floor there are smaller waiting and lounging rooms, and on the top or third floor there are other small rooms and couches in them, where the waiters sometimes rest after their work is done.

THE TROUBLE STARTS.

"The trouble evidently was started by the man who calls himself Gaylord and who, the police say, is 'Cobden' Maguire. If he had not started the fight I fear it would have been a different story and there might have been some killed and the place robbed as a result of the visit of the two strangers.

"The two men repeatedly said they were from New York city and they talked as if they were familiar with that city and its resorts. The man who introduced them said he had first met them in Brown's cafe in New York city.

"The man known as Gaylord or Maguire was annoying his friends, and he also annoyed the two strangers and their friend. He knocked off a member's hat and defied everybody in the room. One of the two strangers took off his hat and remarked, 'Here is a brand-new hat and I would like to see someone knock it around a little.'

"Maguire then made a very insulting remark and gave the defi to the two strangers. Instantly one of them got up and punched Maguire, knocking in an instant thetrouble started. One of the men first punched Maguire, knocking hi mout.

"The two strangers stoo dup aldo the side at the back of the room, with the cash register at their right, and first took two shots at the electric fixture in the ceiling overhead. I am positive it was their plan to plunge their room in darkness and then start in to clean up the place and make their escape by the rear exit into Arlington street.

"But when Maguire recovered from the shock of the blow he had been dealt he and his friends started after the two gunmen, and their friend stepped in between them. In an effort to prevent a free fight in the clubrooms.

MORE SHOTS FIRED.

"Probably three more shots were fired and two of them grazed the head of the peacemaker. It was then that the two men were wounded, I imagine, as he did not know anyone had been shot for hours after, when the policemen came to make their second investigation of the case. "The two strangers then began walking about the rooms, making savage remarks at everyone and punching everyone they met. They held their revolvers at the heads of the persons they encountered and then said, 'This is your Roxbury tough game is it? Well, we will show you fellows up in your right colors.' They then demanded to know how to get out of the place, and everybody shouted at them to go by the stairway. The twenty-two men i nthe rooms were terrified and all tried to hide to escape the bullets of the two desperadoes.

"They finally ran through the small rear serving room and down the back stairs. They removed the bar from the door and stepped into the back yard and then passed through the gate into Arnold street and disappeared, going in the direction of Columbus avenue and Roxbury Crossing."

William H. Martin, who said he was in charge of the club, was closely questioned by the police. He gave his address as 221 Walnut avenue, Revere.

The gunmen were described as follows:

No. 1.—Thirty-eight, six feet two inches tall, weighing 155 pounds smooth faced, dark complexioned, wore dark overcoat and black, soft hat.

No. 2.—Thirty-five, five feet ten inches, weighing 185 pounds, medium complexion, wore black overcoat and green soft hat.

Both gunmen were well dressed.

Big War Order for Worcester Plant

WORCESTER, March 29.—The Worcester Pressed Steel Company has received an order from one of the warring European nations for 200,000 shells for five-inch guns. The contract price, it is understood, exceeds $500,000. The order will keep the plant busy until November. This is the second big war contract received by this company, the first having called for 350,000 seabbards.

SUBMARINE CAPTAIN TELLS OF RAID ON ALLIES' SHIPPING

NEW YORK, March 29.—The Bay today prints an interview secured by Karl H. Von Wiegand with Odam Hansen, commander of the German submarine U-16, one of the new O class boats which has been successfully operating in Anglo-French waters. The interview follows:

KIEL, March 24, via London, March 27.—"Every day that our submarine warfare against the British mercantile marine continues, the more effective will our navy become. War under the sea is new to us; it is new to the world.

"There are no past experiences to learn from, as there are in surface conditions entirely new and many difficulties arising from the behavior of our craft under adverse conditions. War under the sea is as new as war in the air, and it follows that, as boats come in and we receive reports and compare notes, our work becomes more effective and the ring around England becomes tighter.

"These words were spoken to me by Lieutenant-Commander Claus Hansen commanding the U-16, which torpedoed the British steamer Dulwich and the French steamers Ville de Lille and Dinorah.

DANGER TO U. S. SHIPS.

"I understand you don't consider we have made some impression in Anglo-German shipping circles? Be assured—what any sensible person would understand as legitimate. We are now familiar with conditions under sea with our patrols and as our work has become worked out. In, we will become more effective," Hansen answered.

"What about the danger to American ships?" I asked.

"The danger to American and other neutral ships lies in British ships trying to disguise themselves with neutral flags and other devices and that it is reported that when one of our craft is about to fire on a British merchantman.

"Some commanders often have taken long chances. If British ships resort to that practice, we will be compelled to take risks, too.

"Would you sink an American ship?"

"Certainly not, if I knew it was American. Besides," adding with a smile, "you have so few that we have them pretty well photographed in our navy."

SPARED THE WOMEN.

Commander Hansen explained each submarine has a definite area to cruise. On his last cruise he was assigned to the Irish Sea. He told of sinking several boats. "The weather was difficult and I was rather tired," he said. "I was compelled to submerge for hours, and came up in the vicinity of a small trawler. I then ordered the crew to the boats and torpedoed her as several French torpedoers gave chase. We escaped by going down.

"The same evening opposite Havre we stopped the Dulwich. The crew was given ten minutes to get into the boats. The torpedo tore a hole clear under the smokestack.

"The next day we came up in front of Cherbourg to have a look around just as the French steamer Ville de Lille was coming out of the harbor. Evidently believing it was a French submarine which suddenly came out of the water, the steamer showed a French flag, but then started to flee regardless of our signals. I saw two women and two children on the deck. Of course we couldn't torpedo a ship with women and children aboard, so we gave chase.

"The de Lille finally stopped and twenty-four men, women and children clambered with alacrity into the boats. We sent four men aboard and placed bombs in the bottom and sank the steamer.

"They found a little terrier who had been abandoned and fought the men with his teeth, but he was captured and brought along. Ever since he has been the mascot of the U-16."

Two days later the U-16 torpedoed the French steamer Dinorah, loaded with horses and artillery, off Dieppe.

Describing life in the submarines, Commander Hansen said: "It is fearfully trying on the nerves. Every man does not stand it. When in the vicinity of the enemy or when weather conditions make it necessary we submerge.

"SUBMERGING SLEEPINESS."

"Running under sea there is a deathlike silence in the boat, as the electric machinery is noiseless. It is not unusual to hear the propeller of a ship passing over or near us. We steer entirely by chart and compass.

"As the air heats and gets poor and mixed with the odor of oil from the machinery the atmosphere becomes fearful. An overpowering sleepiness often attacks the new men. The story that there is no seasickness in submarines is untrue."

Asked how it felt to torpedo a vessel, Commander Hansen said: "It gives one a peculiar and uncanny feeling to be beneath the water, to see and not be seen. I have passed near ships and seen officers on the bridge and people on the deck. They had not the slightest idea anything was in the vicinity.

"Successful torpedoing depends on the working of the crew and having the machinery in absolute unison."

Asked the greatest danger a submarines, Commander Hansen replied: "Just one—water. There is always danger of it. Water is our worst enemy."

Commander Hansen denied firing torpedo at the British Laertes, which got away from him in February. He confirmed the report that the newest boats carry a small gun.

Discussing reports that the British intend to treat captured U boats crews and officers not as prisoners of war, Commander Hansen said: "I hardly credit that. The British are too chivalrous."

OSBORNE VICTORY IN TANZER CASE

ser's statement that she was mistaken in her identification.

More sensational developments are yet to come in the case. Miss Tanzer was asked to sign an immunity waiver and she did so.

District Attorney Marshall gave out the following statement:

"On Saturday morning Harold Spielberg called to see me. He is the agent for the aircraft company which is on Miss Tanzer's hand. Mr. Spielberg stated that he had an interview with Miss Tanzer regarding her phone Friday evening and lasted until early Saturday morning.

"Mr. Spielberg states that the interview with Miss Tanzer came about in this way: Miss Tanzer has a brother who is a musician at a restaurant in Revere. Mr. Spielberg and his wife. This brother got to know the Spielbergs and stated to Mr. Spielberg in a first talk that his sister was in trouble and asked Mr. Spielberg to see her. Mr. Spielberg declined to see Miss Tanzer, but stated that he would be glad to have a talk with the girl if she would come to his home.

"Miss Tanzer did so on Friday last. She was accompanied by her nephew. At this interview were Mr. and Mrs. Spielberg and a neighbor of theirs and others, including a doctor and his wife. In their presence Miss Tanzer made a full statement. Here are some of the details:

"'Oliver Osborne,' said Miss Tanzer, 'is not James W. Osborne.'

"Miss Tanzer made some other statements which will be made public later. Mr. Spielberg advised Miss Tanzer to go to the United States District Attorney's office today. She consented to do this and appeared here shortly before noon."

RUSSIAN ARMIES INVADE HUNGARY

ROME, March 29.—The Russian embassy today received a dispatch from Petrograd stating that the Austro-German armies in the Carpathians and Northern Hungary are in full retreat.

PETROGRAD, March 29.—Pouring through Dukla Pass, three Russian corps of 120,000 men have captured five Hungarian towns in the district of Saros, according to advices received in the War Office today from the Carpathian front.

While all eyes are directed toward the Carpathian front and the invasion of Hungary, two new Russian victories in Poland are officially reported, one on the Skwa River and another near the Pilica.

The Russian drive through Dukla Pass has resulted in the occupation by Russian troops of Bunzow, Alt Polyanka and Shora. At Komarnik and Czerteza, all to the north of Bartfeld and Svidnik, important railroad towns against which the Czar's troops are marching in force.

The entire Russian forces entered the northern outskirts of Sevidnik Sunday, but met determined resistance and were compelled to retire to await the arrival of the main forces. Bartfeld, a suburb of Bartfeld, has been entered by the Russians, and fighting is reported in progress there. The official reports give these details of the Russian victories on the Skwa and Pilica rivers in Poland:

"In the German offensive east of the Skwa an entire division was engaged. It suffered heavy losses and not only failed to capture any of our trenches, but was compelled to abandon its first line of trenches at the village of Tarak.

MRS. BEERING SOBS ON STAND

Mrs. Mary J. Beering, who fainted while testifying Saturday in the divorce suit brought by her husband, Dr. Frederick W. Beering, Jr., of Jamaica Plain, resumed the stand today and testified, under great stress, about the raid made by her husband and four detectives on her home, No. 11 Eglesion street, on the night of November 20, 1914.

Mrs. Beering, so weak that she had to be seated and to be granted a rest from testifying at frequent intervals, sobbed and was nearly hysterical during the cross-examination which brought out her recital.

During these rests her mother and sister attended her. After two hours on the stand Mrs. Beering retired to an ante room. She was followed on the stand by Dr. Beering in brief additional testimony and then by Lester Lamb, lodger in Mrs. Beering's house, whom Dr. Beering has named in his suit.

Dr. Beering's suit is being heard before Judge Chase in the Suffolk divorce session. Mrs. Beering was cross-examined by John H. Casey. Her testimony gripped the attention of spectators. Regarding the raid, she said:

"The first I knew that night was when I was awakened by a rapping on my bedroom door. I heard Mr. Lamb's voice saying: 'Somebody is trying to get in at the front door.'

"Mr. Lamb run down to the parlor and to the front door. I came out of my bedroom, clad in my night dress, and rushed toward the front door, when three or four searchlights were thrown on my face.

"I yelled to Mr. Lamb: 'Get the baseball bat!' As he started for the bat there was a crash of glass and suddenly the doctor and four other men rushed in, cursing and swearing at the door, which would not give way.

"Someone said: 'There she stands. What a ——— of a mess!'"

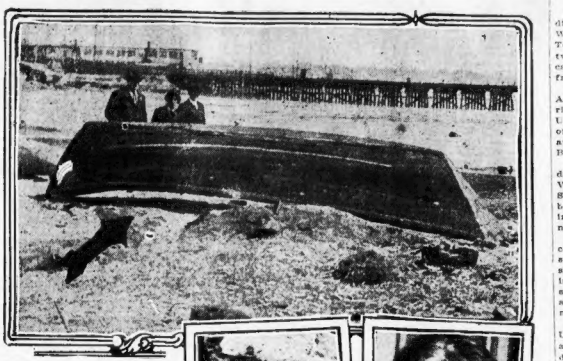
Moran Guilty of Murder of Woman

Makes Plea in Court at East Boston



Scene of tragedy in East Boston beach. Arrow shows where body was found. Photos are of victim, Elizabeth Peirine, also known as Mrs. Elizabeth Rogers, and Francis F. Moran, who today pleaded guilty as slayer.

Francis F. Moran was arraigned before Judge Barnes in the East Boston court today charged with the murder of Elizabeth Peirine, also known as Mrs. Elizabeth Rogers and Elizabeth Welch. Moran pleaded guilty in a strong voice and was held without bail for the Grand Jury.

The complaint was made by Sergeant Daniel J. Sweeney of the East Boston police. He will be indicted and his case brought up in the Superior Court.

The court room was packed and the corridors and stairs leading to the court room were jammed with people trying to gain admittance. Moran seemed unaffected by either the crowd or the gravity of the charge against him. He was not represented by counsel.

When court adjourned Moran was taken to the Charles street jail, heavily manacled and under a strong police guard. He did not seem any more affected by the precautions taken to prevent his escape than he did by the scene in the court room.

Moran's arrest, within a few hours of the discovery of the body on the beach at the rear of the East Boston Burying Ground, was made after the identification of a tan colored buckskin coat which was found near the body, and in the pockets of which were delivery slips of the Suffolk Coal Company of Border street, East Boston.

According to the police, Moran at first denied any knowledge of the woman, although he admitted the coat was his. Later the police claim, he broke down and admitted striking the woman.

FOUND IN BEACH.

The body was found by Vincenzo Mingarto and Bartholomew Gioletti, about 7 a. m. They had gone to the beach to paint their dory. The body was face down in the sand. The hair was matted and blood was clotted about the neck and collar of the dress. Near the body was found her black satin sailor hat and the jacket which led to Moran's arrest.

By means of the coal delivery slips, Sergeant Daniel Sweeney and Patrolman Rourke of the East Boston station, learned that Moran was the man who had made the deliveries. With Inspectors Hart, Deneesy, and McCauley, they went to Moran's house, and got him out of bed. His shoes and some of his clothing was blood stained.

The story which the police claim Moran told, after a "third degree" grilling is substantially:

"I was with Eliza Peirine Saturday night. We met in Saratoga street at 11.30. She had been drinking and was noisy. We went down Swift street to the beach. We went to a boat turned upside down. I moved the boat so that it made a kind of shelter and we sat beneath it.

"STRUCK HER TWICE."

"She began to get insulting. She called me a 'bum.' After she said a lot, I got enraged and hit her.

"I struck her twice. I did not use a weapon. I did not hit her with a stone or a brick—I only used my fist. Then I walked away and left her."

The victim was about forty-five years old. She was born in Nova Scotia.

Her brother, Reuben Felrine, was killed in September, 1914, by his wife, who stabbed him in their home in Davis court. She was released on the plea of self-defense.

For the last few weeks Elizabeth Felrine had been living in Lennon street with a Hitchcock family. Death was due, according to Associate Medical Examiner Watters, to rupture of an artery under the breast-bone, which was fractured, and from concussion of the brain.

Wilson Guest of Argentine Dreadnaught

ANNAPOLIS, Md., March 29.—With President Wilson and his party aboard, the yacht Mayflower arrived off Annapolis at 10 o'clock today, but did not dock. The Argentine battleship Moreno, to inspect which the President came here, steamed down the bay a few miles to meet the yacht and the President and his party went aboard there so as not to delay the arrangements for the luncheon given on the dreadnaught by Senor Naon, the Argentine ambassador. Naval Academy authorities expected the yacht would come into Annapolis harbor late today, when the President would pay a brief visit to the naval school.

With the chief executive on the Mayflower were Secretary of the Navy Daniels, Secretary to the President Tumulty, Dr. Grayson, the President's aid, and Commander Wurtslaugh, aid to Secretary Daniels.

"Double Insanity" of Bay State Women

CHICAGO, March 29.—Two women, believed to be suffering from one of the few recorded cases of "double insanity," were under observation today at the Psychopathic Hospital. The women are Mrs. Charles L. Kittridge, a widow, and her sister, Miss Mary L. Stephens.

Saturday night they dashed from their apartment at No. 1126 East Fifty-fourth street place and ran scantily clad, down the street. They were seen by neighbors, who induced the women to return. They were left in the care of two nurses, but tried to escape again, becoming so violent that the police were notified. They were taken to the station and examined by Dr. Leonard S. Wood, who pronounced them insane.

A brother, said to be a wealthy resident of Springfield, Mass., was notified. Other members of the family, it was reported, live in Boston. Mrs. Kittridge and her sister came to Chicago from Springfield six months ago to study mental healing.

Arrest Near in Mamolette Case

WORCESTER, March 29.—State Police Officers Edward J. McCarthy and Robert E. Molt, who are investigating the Mamolette murder mystery, expect to make an arrest soon. The inquest, which began March 17, but which was continued because of the sudden illness of an important witness, will be reopened this week. Mamolette, the day of his release from jail, was trailed to a lonely section of the city by three men. Mamolette's body was later found in the Shrewsbury woods.

Ask Receiver for Georgia Railroad

AUGUSTA, Ga., March 29.—A petition for a receiver was filed here today against the Georgia & Florida Railroad. The road has a mail line extending from Augusta 250 miles south to Madison, Fla., with 112 miles additional trackage in branch lines. R. Lancaster Williams of Baltimore is president.

U. S. NOT TO SEND TROOPS TO TEXAS

WASHINGTON, March 29.—No additional troops will be ordered by the War Department at Brownsville, Tex., at present, despite the fact that two persons were shot on the American side of the line by stray bullets from across the border.

This announcement was made by Acting Secretary of War Breckenridge today. He explained that the United States already had a squadron of cavalry, a machine gun company and a battery of field artillery at Brownsville.

Secretary of State Bryan said today that at the first intimation that Villa was to attack Matamoras, the State Department had sent word to both sides, warning them against firing across the border. He said that no further warning was necessary.

Secretary Bryan announced the receipt of a dispatch from Consul Johnson at Matamoras, denying that any shots had been fired from aMtamoras into Brownsville, but declaring that shooting from Brownsville into Matamoras had taken place and that two men were wounded.

General Funston, commanding the United States troops on the border, in a dispatch to the War Department today estimated that Villa's army near Brownsville had sixteen field guns and forty or more machine guns. Orders have been given that wounded Mexicans shall not be allowed to cross the river except in cases of emergency.

Less Than 12 Airships for Coast War Duty

CHICAGO, March 29.—"That popular belief that we can fly barn doors as a hurry-up substitute for aeroplanes if we are called upon to defend our coast is dus for a terrific jolt if this country should become involved in war," declared Albert Bond Lambert, head of the United States Aviation Reserves. Mr. Lambert, who is a former president of the Aero Club of St. Louis, came to Chicago to address a big navy meeting.

"We have less than a dozen aeroplanes available for coast duty," said Mr. Lambert, "and practically no organization of flyers. France had 1,300 skilled airmen at the outbreak of the European war. Germany and England were close seconds."

Death of Premier Borden's Mother

HALIFAX, N. S., March 29.—Mrs. Eunice Borden, mother of Premier Sir Robert Borden, died at Grand Pre, today after an illness of two years from spinal paralysis. She was ninety-one years old.

MAJ. HIGGINSON PRAISES CABOT

Major Henry L. Higginson, in testifying today at the Cabot will trial, eulogized his lifelong friend, the late Louis Cabot of Brookline.

He declared Mr. Cabot was an "unusually intelligent and shrewd man," and that Mr. Cabot "must have been talking through his hat" when he told Dr. Elbridge G. Cutler he (Cabot) was suffering from nervous prostration.

Major Higginson appeared as a witness for the will. He was on the witness stand about fifteen minutes. He was examined by Attorney Charles F. Choate, Jr., and was cross-examined by Sherman L. Whipple, counsel for Mrs. B. Vernon Briggs, daughter of Mr. Cabot, who is contesting the will.

Dr. Frank R. Ober of Northeast Harbor, Me., finished his testimony today. After his cross-examination Charles Storrow of Boston, Walter Andrews of Wollaston and Robert M. Stevenson, in addition to Major Higginson—all old friends of Mr. Cabot —testified they had always known him a "normal man."

Major Higginson testified:

"I knew Louis Cabot over seventy years. I met him as a boy. I was a member of the class of '53 at Harvard, while Cabot was in the class of '58.

"We dined and supped together. We played together. We use dto swim together. In fact, we were very good chums.

"At the outbreak of the war I went to the front with the First Massachusetts Cavalry, of which Cabot was an officer. I met him with the cavalry at Beaufort, S. C., in 1862.

"I was then at first captain, but was later promited to the rank of major. He was a second lieutenant and he did this work well. He was chief of scouts, and in addition he rehused to drill the mounted men. It was a very tedious task.

Sets $1,500 Jacot Verdict Aside

In the Suffolk County Superior Court today, Judge Raymond set aside the verdict of $1,500 returned for the plaintiff by a jury last week in the case of Alice F. Callahan against Paul M. Jacot of the Jacot Cafe. Attorneys Fletcher Rainer and Thomas Allen, Jr., argued for the defendant that the verdict was excessive in amount and against the weight of the evidence.

Mrs. Callahan, suing as the administratrix of the estate of her husband, the late E. F. Callahan, alleged that while dining at the Jacot Cafe in August, 1908, her husband was assaulted by a waiter after an altercation.

ELAINE SAVED BY THRILLING FEAT

Elaine, in pensive mood, confides to her lawyer: "Last night my father appeared to me in a dream. He told me not to believe Craig Kennedy any further, but to rely upon you."

With this encouragement, the family attorney, Perry Bennett, makes a declaration of his love and begs the heiress to become his wife. She answers: "Not now. Wait until tomorrow."

A woman calls to tell her that she is a spiritualistic medium and has a message for Elaine from her dead father. The girl asks her lawyer to accompany her to the woman's séance chamber.

The aunt drives to Craig Kennedy's laboratory to consult the detective, whom she still trusts, with her doubts.

There she finds only Jameson, who shows her a note telling Jameson he will be away for several days and asking him to warn Miss Dodge to beware "a woman who calls herself Mme. Savetski."

"That is the woman at whose room I left my hat," remarked the aunt in a startled voice.

Craig Kennedy and the aunt reminded the frightened relative that the moments entrusted to her care in going from Kennedy's laboratory, Elaine had been confronted with what purported to be the ghost of Long Sin, whom she believes that she slew. Horrified by the spectacle, she swooned. A band of Chinese gunmen rush in at a signal from the medium and seize the girl. At the same moment Perry Bennett falls to the floor. The Chinamen bear both into the next room. The girl is not permitted to remain in safety. She is carried to a Chinese Joss house, where she is pledged as a bride for the King Chau, the Spirit of Evil, who will be their bride—one with golden hair.

Whereupon an old Chinaman remonstrates with them against the sacrifice of this young girl to a heathen rite. Long Sin, angered by the interference, attacks the meddlesome old man, whereupon he and others are flung back as by the strength of a giant. Flinging off his disguise, Kennedy stands revealed before them. Seizing Elaine, he covers the crowd with an automatic revolver and goes back to the seance chamber, where Jameson, with the aid of the police, overpowers the pursuing Long Sin, who is made a prisoner. Long Sin pleads for his liberty. "Let me go free," he begs, "and I will tell you who is the Clutching Hand."

He whispers the name, whereupon Craig Kennedy, schooled to surprises, gasps at the astounding revelation.

Over 100,000 Hebrews in Greater Boston, in conjunction with those the world over, will begin the eight days' celebration of the Passover at sunset tonight. Services will be held in the synagogues tonight and for the next seven days. At the Temple Israel, Commonwealth avenue, the Rev. Harry Levi will be in charge of the services.

Under the auspices of the Central Jewish Organization, Moses L. Sedar, Jewish prison chaplain, arranged religious services for Jewish inmates, which will be conducted during the week of Passover by the following rabbis and cantors at the various penal institutions: Rabbi M. M. Eichler and the Rev. E. Wolkowich at state prison, Charlestown; Rabbi H. H. Rubenovitz and the Rev. J. Karlburg at Massachusetts reformatory, Concord Junction; Rabbi P. Israel and the Rev. M. Halpern at house of correction, East Cambridge; Chaplain M. L. Sedar at Charles street jail and the state farm at Bridgewater. He will also conduct a "Seder" service at the Industrial School for Boys at Shirley.

DANVERS FIGHTS STUBBORN FIRE

The Danvers police today estimated at $50,000 the loss caused by a grass fire in that town. The fire first spread to the wooden buildings, covering an acre, owned by William H. Gove of Salem. At the leather machinery plant of J. Ellis Nightingale, the fire destroyed a machine shop and an automobile.

The fire threatened thirty houses in Mill street, and reached six, which were saved by out of town firemen.

ARREST 15 IN GARMENT STRIKE

Fifteen garment workers, out on strike against a clothing house in Brattle square, were arrested by police from the Court square station today, eight on charges of loitering and the others for disturbing the peace. The police say the alleged peace disturbers were following the arrested men to the station house, yelling "Get away from them! Kick 'em!" and making other exhortations to the prisoners.

The racket increased as the police, with their prisoners, came near the station house. Over 200 men and women jammed into Court square, with much shouting. Guests in Young's Hotel, hearing the noise, raised their chamber windows and peered out, wondering if a riot was in progress.

Captain Sullivan of Court square was told yesterday that the strikers were to make a vigorous effort today to keep non-strikers from going to work. The captain sent Sergeants Clark and seventeen patrolmen, some in plain clothes, to Brattle square and adjacent streets.

A crowd of strikers and pickers was outside the clothing factory entrance. Under the new "sauntering and loitering" ordinance, the police warned all to move on and, when one warning was unheeded, made arrests.

With eight prisoners the police started to walk to the station house. The crowd followed and the alleged disorderly shouting to the prisoners led to the other arrests.

The eight taken on loitering charges were Samuel Silverman of New York, union organizer; Oscar Jeanette of Gove street, East Boston; Ralph Senelli of Revere, Angelo Luiseno of Sheafe street, North End; Harry Markoff, Nathan Reiben, Frank Beltrese and Philip Goldberg.

Charged, with disturbing the peace were Samuel Seinkovitz, Amelio Muresco, Max Sinclin, Abraham Schulmann, Victor Atedo, Giuseppi Scata and Salvatore Germano.

DRUG VCTIM BEGS TO BE LOCKED UP

A self-confessed "drug fiend" begged Police Captain Sullivan of Court square station today to have him sent away for a long time because he was desperate for lack of drugs, under the strict operations of the new federal law against habit-forming drugs.

The victim, a decently dressed man of thirty-one years, was arrested on State street by Patrolman Mahoney for begging. At the station he gave his name as James Hector. To Captain Sullivan he said earnestly:

"Captain, I am a dope fiend. I haven't had any dope for over twenty-four hours. I can't get it under the new Harrison law. I am suffering. Look in my stocking and you'll find a needle."

Patrolman Mahoney found in one of the man's socks a crude jack for injecting "dope," contrived of a piece of rubber, a string and a piece of wire. There was a spoon, which the victim used to melt powdered drug into liquid form.

Captain Sullivan said:

"All right. I'll try to get you sent away to where they will take care of you and make a new man of you."

"I wish you would," said the man. "I've been taking dope for ten years and now I can't get any."

Three motorcyclists were spilled by wet pavement while rounding the curve from Beacon street into Harvard street at Coolidge Corner in the morning rush hour today. At 7:30 a lone cyclist tried the curve, skidded, went down, got up and rode away. Two minutes later a tandem motorcycle came up the Beacon street grade and slid flat on the curve. The cyclists got aboard again and again went down. Finally they got away toward Allston safely.

EXPECT EITEL TO DASH TO SEA

WASHINGTON, March 29.—That the Prinz Eitel Friedrich, the German sea raider, will end her stay at Newport News or intern before another twenty-four hours have passed was the general belief in official circles today. Administration spokesmen still kept down "the lid" on the exact time given the vessel to make repairs, but the fact that the battleship Alabama, ordered to Hampton Roads, is due to arrive there tomorrow strengthened this belief.

Reports were current here that the German government had given notice of the cruiser's intention to put to sea. It was intimated at the Navy Department that, while this government had no reason to believe that the British cruisers outside the Virginia capes would venture into the three-mile limit, it was deemed advisable to have at hand the means of enforcing neutrality within American waters in case of emergency.

Court-Martial Proceedings Conducted in Absence of Missing Man; Warrant for Arrest.

The trial board which has been conducting court-martial proceedings against Lieutenant Fred W. Ford of Lynn on the charge of "conduct unbecoming to an officer" will meet late today to report its findings. Lieutenant Ford, who was an officer of E company of the Massachusetts naval militia, and his wife have been missing since February 19. It is alleged that he misappropriated about $1,200 of the company's funds.

Orders for the arrest of Lieutenant Ford have been issued by the Adjutant-General of the State, but Ford has vanished and the court-martial was held in his absence.

The evidence given at the hearings of the trial board is said to have been conclusive. The board is expected to make a unanimous report this afternoon. The board consists of Commodore James T. Parker, president, and Lieutenants Howard G. Copeland and William A. Ratigan, all of the naval militia.

Major Percy A. Atherson was judge advocate.

The specific charges against Lieutenant Ford are that on various occasions previous to his disappearance he juggled the company's accounts, forged the name of an associate officer to a check on a Lynn bank and appropriated money to his own use that had been advanced to him to pay a bill against the company. It is also alleged that he cashed checks against the company's account in a Lynn bank without authority.

The alleged shortage was not discovered until the books were audited after his disappearance. The peculations are said to have covered a period of several months and were covered up by manipulation of his accounts.

CHIEF WHITNEY TO LIE IN STATE

The funeral of General Jophanus H. Whitney, sixty-nine, head of the State police since 1907, who died at his home, No. 32 Franklin street, Medford, yesterday, of pneumonia, will take place from the Universalist Church, Medford, Wednesday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock.

The services will be conducted by Rev. E. M. Barney, pastor of the church. The burial will be at Oak Grove Cemetery, Medford. The body will lie in state at the church for an hour before the services begin.

He was sixteen when he went to the Civil War. He fought in the battles of Spottsylvania, the Wilderness, Laurel Hill, North Anna, Tolopotomy, Bethesda Church, Petersburg, Weldon Railroad, Gravelly Run, Five Forks and Appomattox.

He took to the front at the second call in the Spanish-American War what military experts say was the most soldierly regiment sent Massachusetts. The war closed to quickly to give them a chance o the firing line.

For many years he was chief o the Medford police. For ten years he was with the State police. I 1906 he was appointed a court officer of Middlesex county, and in 1907 was made chief of the State police. In that capacity he handled many famous cases, the most important o which was the Tucker case.

John H. Plunkett, deputy chief of the building inspection department, was prominently mentioned today as the probable successor of General Whitney. Deputy Chief Plunkett is about forty-five years old.

Others prominently mentioned are Frank P. Hardiman of Lowell and James Grady, both of whom are identified with the inspection detective department of the State police.

The name of Deputy Chief George C. Neal is also mentioned, but there is a current of feeling at the State House that Mr. Neal, in view of his advanced years, is satisfied to remain in his present position.

Among the avowed candidates for the office are Inspectors Alfred Proctor of Lynn, Fred Flynn of Lawrence and Silas P. Smith of Cambridge.

Webster Seeks to Buy Slater Land

WEBSTER, March 29.—A committee of local citizens is to ask Mrs. Mabel Hunt Slater, the Boston society leader, to name a price for land bordering on Webster Lake, and which the town would like to purchase as a public park. Nervous Periodical Headaches

Succumb to Anti-Kamnia Tablets

This trouble commonly called "sick headache," is said to be due to the retention of urea in the system. Often it is stated that a poor condition of the blood is a cause of these headaches, or that it is a nervous condition; and in certain cases, no doubt this is true.

Where treatment is demanded, it is more for the pain than anything else, and Dr. A. F. Scheichenost of Louisville, has found Anti-kamnia Tablets to give prompt and satisfactory relief. "Rest should be insisted upon"; he says, "and the patient should go to bed, darken the room, and all the attendants and family should be as quiet as possible. An emetic will sometimes shorten the attack. The bowels should be kept open with "Actolds"—a hot bath and a thorough rub-down with a coarse towel often give grateful relief. Two Anti-kamnia Tablets when the first signs appear, will usually prevent the attack. During an attack, one tablet every hour or two will shorten the attack and "over the usual nausea and vomiting." These tablets may be obtained at all druggists. Ask for A-K Tablets. They are also unexcelled for nervous headaches, neuralgia and all pains.

Webster Land Sold to Boston Man

WEBSTER, March 29.—Mrs. Mabel Hunt Slater has sold to Boston parties the land bordering on Webster Lake, which the town of Webster has been trying to purchase as a public park. Little 'Joy Homer' Is Sixth Baby for Famous Contralto

NEW YORK, March 29.—A sixth child, a daughter, was born to Mme. Louise Homer, the American contralto of the Metropolitan Opera House last evening. Mme. Homer's husband, Sidney Homer, at their home at Rye, N. Y., notifying the Metropolitan management of the arrival of the newest member of the Homer family said that the stranger weighed seven and a half pounds, and that the usual formula of mother and child doing well was applicable in this instance.

The girl is to be named Helen Joy Homer.

The singer and her family have been a favorite topic with those who like to picture the successful mother and the successful artist.

SOX START FINAL WEEK OF PRACTICE

By A. H. C. MITCHELL.

HOT SPRINGS, Ark., March 29.—Today's practice of the Red Sox opened the last week of training at Hot Springs. Next Friday at 1 o'clock the entire Boston delegation will board the train for Memphis, which will be the first stop on their way North to open the championship season.

There will be no practice on Friday, therefore there are only four more days left (including today) of training at the Spa.

Manager Carrigan proposes to make the most of these four days. It is hoped that the weather will continue warm and that there will not be any rain to interfere with the strenuous work that "Uncle Bill" has laid out for his men to do.

With the arrival of Harry Hooper, the eight regular tan Bolser, the squad is at last complete. Hooper's arrival was a big boon to very good condition physically. He has been working out and playing ball in California for the past two weeks and says all he needs is some good batting practice. The pitchers will be faced in the last few weeks were bushers and are anxious to try out the eye of some of their old friends who are numbering on the Red Sox staff.

Hooper's teammates were mighty glad to see him. He is one of the most popular players on the team. Always trying his best, he commands the respect of players and "fans" alike.

Collins Doesn't Like Hot Springs Fixings.

The Boston colony was further depleted yesterday when four of the Red Sox family left for their homes in the East. They were Thomas F. Flanagan and Mrs. Flanagan of Milford, and Miss Margaret Barry of Cambridge, who early in the week left the Red party that left Boston on March 1, and Frederick Lansing, the popular druggist of Rockland, Mass., and old friend of Mr. Lannin.

Four of the players, Ray Collins, Harry Hooper, Everett Scott, Thomas and George Foster went fishing on Sunday, but luck was against them. Collins offered a very good opinion of the piscatorial sport enjoyed in the South here. He prefers the Vermont variety.

Several of the players, including Masterman, McNally and Wagner took a horseback ride accompanied by War Correspondent Howard Reynolds and Publicity Agent Arthur Thomas.

Mr. Cooper, who is director of the moving pictures that Boston is having taken of the Red Sox, had a bad experience on Saturday. He intended to get a moving picture of the players entering the grounds followed by the war correspondents and "fans" with Mr. Cooper himself entering last. Unfortunately the reel ran out just as Mr. Cooper was making his entrance, so he doesn't show in the films. At least, this is the harrowing information conveyed by Mr. Murray, who took the pictures.

Lewis Must Look to His Beau Brummel Laurels.

Duffy Lewis, the dean Brummel of the party, is greatly worried about his "Dutch" Leonard. It has been ascertained that Mr. Leonard has no less than six pairs of cleth top shoes, said cloth being the kind of different shades to match the six different suits of clothes Mr. Leonard instructed his valet to pack in his trunk before leaving home for this Spring.

Mr. Lewis is considering the advisability of wiring instructions to his Boston tailor in order that he may properly eclipse Mr. Leonard when the team reaches home.

Mrs. Dave Shean, wife of the Providence manager, has arrived here. The Sheans live in Arlington.

the elevator or the staircase to the dining-room and ate square meals with less appetite than usual, and they all said hard things about the weather. The manager stood gloomy but firm. It would never do to rise precious arms on that ball ground, with cold draughts stealing stealthily on heated bodies; idleness was bad, but rheumatism and the grippe were worse. A man in the early days of training looks husky and robust, but he is really a very sensitive person. And health means money and glory to an athlete with the season before him.

Cold Weather Hindered the Practice of the Red Sox.

We were in the midst of a series of trial games between the regulars, or Carrigans, and the second-string men, or Wagnerites. To make it more arduous for the former, some of the best regular pitchers were assigned to duty on the Wagnerites, but none of them cared to pitch their darndest so early in the season, whereas each of the Carrigans ran and ran as hard as he could; so the regulars had the best of it. When the cold spell came, however, anything like a real game, even of but six or seven innings, was out of the question. Carrigan compromised so far as to permit the men to put on their flannels and troop down to the grounds, and even to knock and toss the ball about for an hour or two; but before there had been any opportunity to perambulate even under triple tiaggers, he called them off, and unfolded the real plan that he had been keeping in the back of his head all the while—"A hike round the mountain!" The boys' ears it sounded like an echo of the good old times, when a cross-country walk or run was the accepted substitute for suspended activities of any other sort; we could always get Pudge Heffelfinger, and rain, snow or ice could not deter us from our excursion with blood rapering in our veins, lungs moving gloriously and muscles full of the satisfaction that none but the athlete ever knows. Once on the round the mountain carried me back some five and forty or more years, and I made up my mind to write a prescription on my own account.

I did not write it for the purpose, for young men are young men, and are not privy to the great secrets that old men are apt to keep in spite of the preposterous mask of white hair and furrowed cheeks behind which they hide. He prefers the Vermont variety.

Several of the players, including Masterman, McNally and Wagner took a horseback ride accompanied by War Correspondent Howard Reynolds and Publicity Agent Arthur Thomas.

NEW ORLEANS, March 29.—Joe Jackson's slashing hit over second in the tenth inning gave Cleveland a 3 to 2 victory over New Orleans. Mitchell and Hagerman worked five innings apiece for the Indians and each let the Pelicans down with two hits. Not a run was made until the eighth.

PHILADELPHIA PHILLIES.

ATLANTA, Ga., March 29.—The Phillies open a two-game series against the local Crackers today. Whitted is to stay in centre field, at least until Parkerts injured back gets better, and Nichoff will continue at second. Dugey's bad finger is progressing favorably.

NEW YORK GIANTS.

DALLAS, Tex., March 29.—The Giants had little trouble in downing the Dallas team, 19 to 6. They piled up sixteen hits in the process. The Giant colts won at Oklahoma City, 8 to 6.

ST. LOUIS TEAMS.

ST. LOUIS, March 29.—After pitching six scoreless innings, Lee Meadows, the local Nationals' pitcher, who wears spectacles, gave way in the seventh, granting the American four runs in that inning and one in the next, while his team scored only two throughout the game.

First Relay Team to Get Tiger Letters

PRINCETON, N. J., March 29.—Princeton's undergraduate athletic committee has awarded the varsity "P" to the members of the winning indoor relay team which this year defeated Yale, Cornell, Pennsylvania and Michigan. This is the first time that Princeton has ever done this, but the remarkably successful season the committee decided, warranted the action.

The four who received the "P" are W. B. Moore, S. K. Atha, Captain I. D. MacKenzie and M. J. Hayes.

Busy Week Ahead of Braves

Final Work in South Begins

By JACK CONWAY.

MACON, Ga., March 29.—The champion Braves today started their final week of Spring training in this fair town. Stallings' peppery band will break camp early Saturday morning, bid goodbye to the dear old inhabitants of Macon and board a rattler for Atlanta, from where they will start their march North.

The Braves will play at Greensboro, Durham, Richmond, Washington and Bridgeport on their way back to the Hub. The gallant crew will reach Boston on Sunday night, April 11, ready for a couple of exhibition tussles with the "Rah, Rah, Rah" boys of Harvard and Brown before they start their league campaign.

PLAN PLENTY OF BATTING PRACTICE

This will be a strenuous week for the champions. They will engage in a couple of tussles with the Cleveland American Association team here, while they play at Atlanta on Saturday. Stallings will also have his men out at the ball yard each morning and will have them engage in batting and fielding practice.

The "Big Chief" will give his players plenty of batting practice. They have been hitting the ball well this Spring, but the "Miracle Man" is always eager to have them improve in this department of the game.

The Braves lost many ball games in the early part of 1914 as a result of their inability to hit. Stallings does not wish to have his team get away to a poor start this year and it will not be any fault of his if his noble gang does not knock the boards off the fence when the flag fight gets underway.

Poor Treatment from Atlanta Management.

The Braves are still discussing the miserable treatment which they received from the management of the Atlanta baseball club last Saturday. Billy Smith, manager of the Atlanta nine, forced the Champions to play in a cold, drizzling rain. He asserted that a minor league club must get the money when it is possible to do so. As only 316 persons paid to see the game at twenty-five cents a head, we cannot see the least bit of logic in Smith's statement.

Stallings was not with the Braves Saturday, as he went to his plantation at Haddock to spend the week-end. It looked as though Smith was desirous of imposing upon Fred Mitchell who was in charge of the Braves. Mitchell was not able to refuse to play for if he had done so the Boston club would have forfeited $500. The veteran solved part of the difficulty by keeping James, Tyler, Rudolph and Gowdy at the hotel.

Atlanta Incident Peeves Stallings.

The rest of the regulars refused to stay indoors, as they were disgusted with Smith's actions and would not give him the satisfaction of playing a second string team in which case the poor old Atlanta ball club might possibly have breezed in a winner.

The Braves fortunately escaped any physical injury. Joe Connolly was suffering from a severe cold Saturday but he is feeling better today.

If Stallings had been in Atlanta Saturday, he might have made a few remarks which would have made his famous Philadelphia oration about Connie Mack last Fall look like a schoolboy's first speech. The Braves, however, will be back in Atlanta Saturday and Stallings will receive an opportunity to let the sunshine upon some of his feelings which he is forced to supress just now.

The members of the Braves' squad will not let up any in their work these days, as the players realize that the team must be reduced to twenty-one men by May 1.

The Champions now have twenty-six players under contract. Fred Mitchell is signed as a coach this year and consequently will not be included among the twenty-one men who are kept by Stallings.

The players now under contract with the Champions are: pitchers, Rudolph, James, Tyler, Hughes, Strand, Luque, Crutcher, Cheesham, Cottrell, Hess and Davis; catchers, Gowdy, Whaling, Tragessor and Snuggy; infielders, Schmidt, Evers, Maranville, Smith, Martin, Fitzpatrick and Cather; outfielders, Moran, Magee, Connolly and Gilbert.

Martin broke his right leg several weeks ago and therefore need not be considered. The Braves will retain him by some form of agreement, but he will not be rated as one of the members of the team until he has recovered from his injury.

"No-Hit" Davis has signed a 1915 contract but he will not report to the Braves until May 15, when he will have graduated from the Harvard Law School.

Stallings Against 21-Man Limit Rule.

Boss Stallings has been informed by the powers-that-be in the Taner circuit, that Davis will not be included in the Braves list of players until he reports for service.

This will make it necessary for Stallings to let out three men on May 1, while he will have to dispense with the services of another player if he wishes to keep Davis. As Davis is one of the most promising hurlers in the big leagues, Stallings is certain to keep him on the payroll.

The "Miracle Man" is not pleased with the twenty-one men limit rule. In discussing the matter today he said:

"The rule limiting a club to twenty-one players is not a good one. It will cost the enterprising clubs thousands of dollars. There are a number of teams which own close to $20,000 worth of undeveloped ball players. They are youngsters with great promises and who only require a little coaching to develop them into high class performers.

Little Chance Now to Develop Youngsters.

"It does not seem right that a club which takes the trouble to develop new stars, should be obliged to turn them over to some other combination. If the present rule is retained, baseball managers cannot afford to keep youngsters on the bench for two and three years. They will only be able to have men on the payroll who can enter a game at a moment's notice.

"It has often taken two or three years to bring out star players. Eddie Collins is a fine example of this kind of ball player. Connie Mack spent several years in coaching Collins and I do not believe that this practice should be discouraged.

"I have not yet decided what players I will retain. I will keep what men I believe will do the club the most good. If I think that I require eleven pitchers to win another pennant, I shall keep that number of hurlers and cut down in other departments. But if I should be of the opinion that I need a dozen outfielders to repeat our feat of 1914, I would get that number of outfielders. Conditions will govern my actions this year and I will change my plans when circumstances warrant my doing so.

HARVARD MEN ON GRIDIRON TODAY

Harvard's football candidates will report this afternoon at 3 o'clock for spring work. About twescore men are expected to answer the call and daily workouts, barring Saturday, will continue until college closes, on April 18, for the spring recess.

Captain Mahan will be on hand to greet the candidates and among the men who will assist him as coaches will be: Mal Logan, Stan Pennock and Wallie Trumbull, with Charley Brickley lured from the call of the ball field as an occasional visiting coach.

Coach Haughton is not expected to have a hand in the coaching until the last week.

Of the team which started against Yale, only three remain in college—Captain Mahan, who is trying for the varsity nine; Parson, a varsity oarsman, and D. J. Wallace.

32 Survive Cut in Crimson Ball Squad

As the result of the latest cut in the Harvard baseball squad, only thirty-two candidates remain. Seventeen of these are battery men. Those who were retained are:

Pitchers: W. C. Cummings, '17; H. E. Fitzsimons, '16; R. Frye, '16; W. C. Garrity, '17; H. Wood, '17; J. B. Withington, '15; W. Wilson, '17; Whitney, '16; Ayer, '16; Wood, '17; A. D. What the Schoolboys Are Doing in Athletics

Coach Dan O'Flaherty of English High has again recognized the ability of Joe McKenzie. He has shifted the brainy athlete from second base to catcher, and this means that the field generalship of McKenzie should help the blue and blue this season.

Last Fall McKenzie was changed from halfback to quarterback on the football team, and his quick thinking power helped win many a game for English. Last season McKenzie was mentioned as a possible member of the interscholastic baseball nine, but was just a little shy of the necessary requirements.

Coach O'Flaherty gave out the uniforms to the boys during practice on the Columbus avenue grounds, but did not mention definitely which of the candidates could "keep" the suits throughout the season. If for nothing else, it is worth the energy of earning one of the suits and getting the glory of playing also.

Henry Egan, who captained South Boston High for three years, will be given a tryout by the Lynn club of the New England League. His chance to become a "pro" looks mighty good, if his work in the past can be taken as a criterion.

* * *

The scouts of the minor league clubs are always on the job, and can be seen any day watching a game between two good school nines. Many boys have already been given contracts and the lure of the diamond footlights (with the salary, of course) has resulted in a number of school stars signing.

* * *

It is rumored that a certain university has requested several well known school athletic stars to enter college, with the understanding that they are to get a complimentary education.

Many of the school coaches are now putting the finishing touches on their ball players by dividing the squads into nines. This might be called the "a la can" course.

Some of the boys over at the B. A. A. boathouse took a plunge into the icy waters after their turn in the shells. They still claim that the newspapers should have used their pictures on account of their daring deed.

As far as can be learned through the school officials, the blame for this mistake is not placed upon anyone. It was merely an oversight.

Curiosities of Nature

Some Strange Things and the "Why" of Them

A NATURALIST states that a moth—and, for that matter, many other insects—will fly towards a flame for the same reason that a plant seeks the light. Insects, it seems, move in the direction of the light-rays that fall upon them. But the light must be of considerable intensity to produce a marked result. Towards a feeble glare the insect would move but leisurely, but in the case of a comparatively bright light, like the flame of a candle or lamp, the insect travels with great rapidity to its death.

No substance that refuses to dissolve in water has an odor. It is the actual substance itself, floating in particles in the air, that appeals to the nose, and not simply a vibration of the air, as in the case of light and sound. The damper a thing is the more powerful the odor it gives off. A pleasing proof of the fact can be had by walking in a garden after rain or in the evening when the dew is falling. There is no end to the curiosities of smell. It is, for instance, the vapor of a liquid that smells and not the liquid in the mass itself. If eau-de-cologne be poured into the nostrils the nose refuses to recognize any odor there at all.

The fact that teakwood is coarse-grained, greasy to the touch and possesses an offensive odor kept it in disrepute with English shipbuilders until 1857, when British shipbuilding and railway interests began to recognize its value during the next seven years all the shipbuilding countries in the world joined in an ever-increasing demand for this timber until its prices were forced up. It has practically become the staple of the local wood industry for the greater part of India. Teak is being freely planted by the Indian Forestry Service in the important civil stations all over India, even as far north as Saharanpur, Dehra Dun and Lahore.

Hands Across a Thousand Forgotten Ages

The Human Hand, One of Nature's Marvels of Efficiency, and How It Differs from That of the Gorilla

The hands of Mischa Elman, the famous violin virtuoso.

The hands of Leopold Godowsky, the noted master of the piano.

By GARRETT P. SERVISS

SIR CHARLES BELL many years ago wrote a famous book on the wonders of the human hand. He regarded the hand as evincing design in creation. The evolutionist considers that the hand proves the theory of the generic relationship of man to the lower animals, or of his descent from some ancestor common to him and to apes, monkeys and other creatures more or less resembling him in physical characteristics. The chirosophist, palmist or hand reader thinks that the hand is a register of the character and destiny of the owner.

In fact, the hand is, like the eye, but in a very different way, a kind of "window of the soul." One does not need to be a fortune teller in order to read what the hand records of the occupation, the temperament, the tastes and, inferentially, the fortunes of its possessor. Careful study shows the existence of types of hands, such as the "artist's hand," the "musician's hand," the "inventor's hand," and many temperamental varieties from those showing brutal and coarse instincts to those that denote the possession of high mental powers and spiritual tendencies.

These things show themselves, because the hand is emphatically the instrument of the mind, its tool and implement, by means of which the brain not only turns thoughts into deeds, giving them physical expression, but also fashions additional instruments of the mind's own invention. The hand is the first and most perfect of machines, and at the same time it is the maker of other machines. If the hand had not been developed, step by step, along with the brain, man never could have brought his mental superiority into effective play over the subjugation of the material world. The wonders of the hand are a reflected image of the wonders of the head.

By courtesy New York Zoological Society.

Then look at this hand. It belongs to a gorilla. At first glance it does not appear so vastly different from a human hand, but it will be seen that the thumb of the monkey is shorter and on the same plane as the fingers.

The apes and monkeys all have hands which, at first glance, strikingly resemble ours. But go to a zoological garden or a museum of natural history and compare the hands of those animals with your own. You will see the monkey picking the meats out of nutshells with a skill that you could not rival with your unaided fingers, but you will see, at the same time, that his hands are very undeveloped from the point of view of human needs. It is usual to point out that the great superiority of the human hand resides largely in the peculiar mobility of the thumb, which enables us to oppose it to each of the fingers, or to all of them at the same time. Apes and monkeys cannot do this as we do, because their thumbs are shorter and are placed in the same plane with the fingers. The human thumb is swung upon a base which moves over the other bones of the palm, and its motions are governed by a long flexor (bending) muscle, which is peculiar to the human hand.

In addition to this, the bones of the wrist are arranged for greater flexibility than exists in the wrist of the lower animals, while special nerves give a delicate sensibility, particularly in the ends of the fingers, which reacts upon the mechanical functions of the hand in such a way that it seems almost to have an intelligence of its own.

Without entering into the discussion of how the variations have been brought about, it should be evident to anybody that the same fundamental structure underlies the human hand and the ape's hand. Nature, we may say, began by conceiving the general idea of a hand, an instrument for grasping. It is not necessary to consider what she developed the hand from, but, having made it, she gave it first to the ape and monkey tribe, to enable them to climb trees and to seize nuts and fruits.

When man was brought into existence, on the fundamental plan of the climbing animals, the grasping members were modified and reshaped to meet his needs. The rear pair of hands were changed into true feet, for man was an animal walking erect, on the level, and not needing prehensile members both before and behind. The front pair underwent the changes that we have already noticed, but which, notwithstanding the marvelous increase of capability that they imparted to it, left the human hand bearing a striking resemblance to the lumbler member from which it had been developed. The faces of men and monkeys are not more like and not more unlike than are their hands.

We have seen that the peculiar mobility of the thumb is one of the principal reasons for the superiority of the human hand. Now read this from Alfred Russell Wallace: "The foot of man differs largely from that of all apes in the horizontal sole, the projecting heel, the short toes and the great size of the great toe, which is never divergent but parallel to the other toes—all perfectly adapted for maintaining the erect posture and for free motion without any aid from the arms or hands. In apes the foot is formed almost exactly like our hand, with a large thumb or great toe quite free from the other toes, and so articulated as to be opposable to them, forming with the long finger-like toes a perfect grasping hand."

In what an infinite number of different ways human hands turns and develops her basic ideas!

Woman's Thirst for Admiration

Empty Flattery Too Often Mistaken for the Genuinely Honest Thing

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

NOTHING in all life world can convince a woman that a man is not absolutely justified for being in love with her. Nothing can convince her that she is not being cheated out of her birthright and given an unfair deal and being abused and neglected and generally maltreated by malicious fate unless her progress through life is marked at intervals by admiring smiles.

Everyone of us has enough sane judgment to know when a man is making a fool of himself by falling in love with somebody else. But when it comes to the first personal singular, judgment fails. We don't have to deserve love or to win it—we just want it! And by the force of wanting we expect to attract it; while because of the force of that same desire we think the tide of life ought to go out of its way and digress about all obstacles in order to wash up on the shores at our feet a shipwrecked mariner who will exclaim at once and in glowing terms at our own first person singular supreme charms!

We want admiration—ergo; we must have it.

And the ways in which we set out to get it, oh, my sisters, are strange and wonderful—and wonderfully ineffectual. We make ourselves fine with gay raiment. We learn all the futile little tricks of modern society. We manoeuvre to outshine each other women. We cater to the very characteristics in men which in our hearts we least admire—and which, when deliberately appealed to, fail to yield lasting or deep response. We make ourselves cheap and conspicuous and easily attainable and lower our best standards. And all of this for admiration and the glitter of compliments.

And even while we are chasing in a circle as amusingly futile as the pursuing of derbies when absurd whirls after her own fluffy tail, there are the big emotions waiting outside the little circle. We choose for our daily round.

WELL WORTH HAVING

Needless admiration is well worth having. But it is not to be confused with mere compliments, or with amused tolerance or with patronizing tribute to the "weaker sex." No grown woman can really want a man to like her in the way he would an adorable pretty child. No laying of flesh and blood cap live on the sort of glowing criticism a beautiful picture might call forth. And no woman of character can be satisfied to appeal to man save in an intellectual way.

But most of us go unerringly after what analysis surely shows us we do not want. We won't discriminate between praise and flattery and honest admiration. For the sake of the icing we swallow cake that is made of moldy flour and cold storage eggs and rancid butter.

We envy the woman who is showy and popular. We despair because of our inability to trail through pronounced with a string of courtiers. We want to have other women see that we are admired. We want to have the men we honestly like see that a lot of men whom we probably honestly dislike admire us.

And for whose good is it all? Admirers are not always desirers. The girl of one love affair is likely to marry and marry far better than the girl who, with a string of admirers to choose from, selects the one who most caters to her and who most gracefully flatters her and passes by the sincere affection that dares to look at her with honest eyes and speak to her with a true tongue.

How much difference does it make in your life if people exclaim at your marvellous dancing or compliment your exact style, or envy your long eyelashes? Does any amount of such adulation give you real, lasting, worthwhile experience? The glow of approbation is as useless to advance you in the world or to help you grow in strength and ability as is a soap bubble to stay forever on the end of a pipe mirroring a rainbow in its heart.

But the true admiration that honest ability honestly exerted wins—ah, that is another matter.

WHERE THE DIFFERENCE LIES

If you have dancing ability and you turn it to account—either making a livelihood through it or teaching little slum children grace and rhythmic expression—if you achieve something signal through this talent—you will receive true admiration—and you will be too busy to notice it! But there is all the difference in the world between the admiration that matters, some women play to the gallery—and there are far more interested in the applause given to them than in the concrete results of what they have done to win it. And some women are doing work—home work, personal work—which is worth matters not which, for their interest is in doing well their task. They are not considering the flattery that might confuse them as to real issues in their efforts. The are considering the end of a job well done.

Ulysses had to stop his sailors' ears with wax and have himself tied to the mast so he could safely pass the Siren's isle. There are a great many of us who are the wreckage in the sea about the Siren Island—There are numerous craft drifting off the reefs for no other reason than because they listen to the siren song of praise. And so sweet sounds the chant that they don't look out into life's sea and remember where they are pointing.

A great many women are modest enough not to think themselves irresistible until a few flatterers have told them so. But they long to be made to believe.

Don't listen. The Siren Song of Flattery leads right to the rocks. The faithful attachment of one loyal man is a fine thing to have. The admiration of a real friend is manna to the spirit. But that you have to win and deserve—if you want to keep it long.

And the only way to deserve real admiration is to be so busy about your task in life that you forget the applause that honestly and always comes in the end to a labor well performed.

The Wrong Ticket

The cheap swell in the English railway compartment was airing his superiority, to the unutterable disgust of his fellow travellers.

"You know," he remarked, "I don't often ride third class. One meets such frightfully common people."

One of his victims groaned.

"I generally travel by motor," continued his "bragship," "but my chauffeur is laid up at present, wretched fellow."

Thus he piled on the agony.

"All tickets ready!" shouted the collector, and our hero handed up his with an air of condescension.

"Sorry, sir," said the conductor, with a grin, "but this is your uncle's I presume."

Amid the jeers of the other passengers, Mr. Boastful changed compartments with alacrity, taking his pawnticket with him.

Hunting the Autograph

How Some Geniuses Have Been Fooled

THERE is one kind of hunting that is modern, and that is the hunt for the autograph. There is not in existence an autograph of an English monarch earlier than Richard the Second. Up to the time of Henry the Fifth the monarch's seal sufficed as his signature. Written autographs did not become common until the middle of the sixteenth century, when it was entered that every man and woman who could write must put both his Christian name and surname to any legal document.

This decree gave an opportunity to autograph hunters. There is scarcely a great man who has not been fooled at one time or another by the autograph hunter.

One of the most noted autograph letters of the Duke of Wellington was obtained by a ruse. The Duke was dunned by a certain "Mr. Tomkins" for his son's washerwoman's bill, whereupon he indignantly wrote:

"Field Marshal the Duke of Wellington has received a letter from Mr. Tomkins stating that the Marquess of Douro is in debt to his mother, Mrs. Tomkins. The Duke of Wellington is not the Marquess of Douro. The Duke regrets to find that his eldest son has not paid his washerwoman's bill. Mrs. Tomkins has no claim on the Duke of Wellington. The Duke recommends her, failing another application, to place the matter in the hands of a respectable solicitor."

The said Mr. Tomkins chuckled over the hoax, and carefully stored the letter for the amusement of future generations.

Both Tennyson and Carlyle were fooled in an equally absurd manner. The poet received a clever-worded letter from a Sunderland merchant, asking permission to christen a ship which he was going to launch Alfred Tennyson. He apologized for the presumption on the plea that he had lost the whole of his fortune and was making a new start in life. He was certain that the name of the poet would bring him luck.

Tennyson was both touched and pleased, and, after sending the permission, he chanced to mention the matter to Carlyle.

"The miscreant has taken us both in," bellowed Carlyle. "He is one of those autograph hunters. I had just such another letter from him this morning, and answered it sympathetically, too!"

One of the most characteristic letters Ruskin ever penned was dispatched in May, 1886, to a correspondent who begged for a donation to pay off a debt on a chapel. Ruskin replied that he was "cordially amused" at the request, and declared, "my first word to all men and boys who care to hear me is 'Don't get into debt; starve and go to Heaven; but don't borrow.'" In a brusque style he asserted that the sect to which the writer belonged was "entirely objectionable and undurable," and of course refused to forward any money. The humor of the situation lay in the fact that Ruskin's correspondent promptly sold this letter for a good sum, and the money was devoted to the funds of the chapel.

Robert Louis Stevenson was generous to autograph hunters. His usual practice was to send his name written on a card, and this he called "fancy plain." But, if his correspondent were polite enough to inclose an addressed envelope bearing a Samoan stamp, he was rewarded with the "two-pence colored" style of the "card with bear and a verse similar to this:

"I know not if I wish to please,
I know not if I may,
I only scribble at my ease
To pass a rainy day."
Or he would write in this strain:
"How jolly 'tis to sit and lauxh,
In gay green wood,
And write a merry autograph
For other people's good!"

The value of autographs is largely determined by their scarcity and the eminence of those who penned them. Autographs of men like Gladstone, who replied to obscure correspondents, have no great value. Autographs of royalty are prized for sentimental reasons. A letter of Marie Antoinette, preserved in the British Museum, is valued at $250, while a communication from Cardinal Wolsey is worth double that. Cromwell's signature to a blank commission is worth $60. A letter of Lord Nelson to Lady Hamilton has brought $210.

There are not more than six authentic specimens of Shakespeare's autograph. His autograph might be valued at $50,000.

Toeing the Mark

The little South American republic was having another revolution.

But the people didn't worry; they knew from past experience that a ball was being held to celebrate it in the capital.

The President was just tangoing with a dusky belle when the alarm came:

"The enemy!"

The President did a bolt, and the enemy followed. Over the garden wall, across two squares, past churches, shops, the mad chase went.

The President, already breathless with dancing, had to give in at last.

"Spare me—spare me!" he gasped, holding up his hands.

The rebel chief held a revolver to his head.

"Now," he said sternly, "just tell me who taught you that new step of the tango!"

A Man and His Wife

John Slips Out Late at Night to Go to the Party and Leaves Isabel

By Virginia Terhune Van de Water

CHAPTER XXVI.

Copyright, 1915, Star Company

ONLY miserable misunderstandings could come from further discussion of the subject of Adelaide Simmons, Isabel Hamilton decided. She was too much hurt by John's attitude to wish to speak of the matter again.

She had meant what she said when she told him that he had put her in the wrong, and although he had attempted to explain away his actions, she still felt that he had deceived her. His accusation that she was "unreasonably jealous" stung her sharply. She determined to show him that his movements were of little consequence to her and that she could be secretive as well as he.

The man himself was indignant at what he considered his wife's underhand methods of learning of his affairs. He acknowledged to himself that he had not been entirely candid with her in explaining the matter of the telephone call—yet her suspicions made it impossible for him to be frank. Adelaide Simmons had telephoned to ask him if he would not like to meet her and a party of her friends late that evening for supper at a Broadway restaurant.

"I would ask you to bring your wife—if I thought she would want to come," Adelaide said. "But the crowd will be, perhaps, a little gayer than the people she is accustomed to. For we are all old friends, you know. Yet if you think she will care for the lark, why, bring her along."

John knew very well that Isabel would not care for it. He knew, too, that she would not approve of his going without her. Therefore he would say nothing about it. He had not declined the invitation positively, although he had not really meant to accept it. But he did not want to wound Adelaide, as he said that he would see about it."

Had Isabel been pleasant and affectionate, he would have remained at home with her. After their quarrel, he wandered aimlessly into the little parlor while she went to bed. He felt uneasy and discontented, angry with his wife and out of temper with himself. It was only half past nine when he threw aside the evening paper, for it failed to hold his attention. He glanced around for some object to interest him, and saw the book that he had loaned never made him so uncomfortable, a man was not to be blamed for going away from home for amusement. Certainly he was not going to bed as early in the evening as this!

HE IMAGINES HIMSELF VERY UNFAIRLY TREATED

He had brought himself to the point where he felt very unfairly treated. This state of mind justified him in his own eyes in seeking consolation where he could find it.

He thought of Adelaide. She was good company and did not get morose. Over the supper table he would be asked for a meat pie. This was brought in due course, and he started eating it with evident relish. The girl waited for a little time wondering very much where she came in. At last, in sheer desperation, she said to her companion:

"The pie is good, Jock."

"Good?" replied Jock, "I should think it is; it's ripping! You should get one."

He dressing room. Here he could slip quickly into his evening clothes.

Tip-toeing to the door of the bedroom, he entered and stood for a moment at the foot of the bed, listening to his wife's breathing. It was not so regular as to make him think she was asleep. On the contrary, he knew that she was awake and conscious of his presence. Had she spoken gently at this moment, had she voiced a desire to conciliate him, he would have remained at home. In married life so much hinges on seeming trifles on the word that should not be spoken or on the word that is unuttered! At this psychological moment Isabel committed the fatal error of sullen and disapproving silence.

The average man resents disapproval, and John Hamilton resented it. He left the room as softly as had entered, going by way of the dressing room and closing the door behind him. Opening his closet, he got out his evening suit, then swiftly put the studs into a dress shirt, and proceeded to make himself ready his excursion downtown. He was glad that he had shaved that morning as that it would not be necessary to repeat the process this evening; his hand was hardly steady enough at this juncture for him to care to perform this delicate task.

It was after 10 o'clock when he was ready to go out. With a sensation of guilt he donned his overcoat and high hat and left the apartment.

Isabel, lying awake, listening to every sound, wondered at first why John was taking such a long time to undress. She had been surprised when she heard him go into his dressing room, for she had supposed he would sit up reading, as he often did. She was extremely touchy when she found—as she fancied—that he was really preparing to go to bed at a sane and decent hour instead of sulking in the parlor until long past midnight.

JOHN GOES OUT AND DOES NOT SAY A WORD

She settled herself comfortably in bed with a sigh of satisfaction. Now she felt she could get right to sleep. For, after all, perhaps John was sorry for his misbehavior and was going to be a model man. He used to be before he and she began to have their little quarrels.

The unusual silence startled her from her light doze. How still the apartment was! Where was John? She would just peep into his dressing room and see.

The door opened, showed her that the little room was in darkness. Turning on the electric light, she saw that there was no sign of John across the back of a chair. Running to the closet, she glanced in. His dress suit and some of his extra patent leather shoes; no was his high hat.

He had gone out somewhere at this time of the evening—and had not told her a word about it!

Well Recommended

A young country Scotsman and his sweetheart went to Glasgow for a day's outing. After spending the morning looking round the big shops and the centre of the city, the young man suggested that as it was near 1 o'clock they should look out for a suitable eating house to get something to eat.

Having spotted a likely place, they entered and took their seats at a small table, and when the waitress came to take their order the young man asked for a meat pie. This was brought in due course, and he started eating it with evident relish. The girl waited for a little time wondering very much where she came in. At last, in sheer desperation, she said to her companion:

"The pie is good, Jock."

"Good?" replied Jock, "I should think it is; it's ripping! You should get one."

Complete Stock Market News Daily in American

Following the reopening of the exchanges and the resumption of stock transactions there was for many weeks a period of suspended animation which, within the past week, seems to have been dispelled. Business has been resumed on a scale and with a vigor that, taken in connection with other indications, points to a revival of affairs generally. Considering this as the beginning of a new era of prosperity the Boston AMERICAN today resumes publication of the regular stock market reports, which during the period of closure of the great exchanges were, naturally, rendered inoperative and superfluous.

TODAY'S STOCK MARKETS.

By W. H. ROSS.
Financial Editor.

When markets opened today prices ranged higher, and the earliest trading the volume of business was not large. In Boston American Zinc was up ⅜ at 29¾, Lake was up 1⅛ at 28⅛, Shannon was up ¼ at 6¾, Tamarack was up 1 at 135, Copper Range was up ¼ at 45¼, and Arcadian was unchanged at 8¾.

In New York B. R. T. was up ¼ at 90, Steel was up ⅜ at 49¾, Reading was up ¼ at 148, American Can was unchanged at 29¾, American Telephone was up ¼ at 122⅝, Amalgamated was up ¼ at 63⅜. Western Pacific was up ⅜ at 12⅝. Erie was up ¼ at 24⅛, Bethlehem Steel was up ⅝ at 78, and Canadian Pacific had advanced 1⅝ to 164.

TRADERS ARE SANGUINE.

Traders were quite sanguine, and in commission houses expectation prevailed that public participation will be on a scale which will restore general activity for a long time. Transactions on the Boston Exchange on Saturday last totalled 42,364, the most business done in a two-hour session in three years. Trade in almost every line is showing some improvement. One prosperity sign was be reopening today of eight steel mills at Newport, Ky. Two more will resume tomorrow. The market withstood considerable profit taking last week in a manner to suggest great inherent strength. There has been considerable selling of Americans by foreigners. At the start and at noon today the former ranged lower in London. British investors are liquidating foreign holdings to invest in war securities for patriotic reasons.

BIG FOREIGN TRADE.

As large as this country's foreign trade is at present, it is believed that it will increase for months to come. According to indications the United States will have $1,000,000,000 trade balance in its favor by July 1. Agricultural experts are figuring that unless crops have a bad setback this country's harvest products will total $11,000,000,000 this year. There is plenty of money available under 4 per cent., and nothing seems lacking for a prosperity foundation.

J. MORGAN'S MISSION.

As to what will happen now that an eminent American banker has reached the money centre of Europe, a local financial publication says:

"With the arrival of J. P. Morgan in London, several large foreign credits will now probably be established in New York. Already the promise of such credits has stimulated foreign exchange a trifle. But international bankers do not anticipate any marked advance in exchange rates, for with foreign credits Europe's indebtedness to us will increase."

The New York cotton market opened form with prices ranging from three points lower to four points higher. When prices were higher at the opening in Chicago.

"The Rabbit's" Column

By Walter J. Maramville
"HORTSTOP OF THE BRAVES

MACON, Ga., March 29.—We are back in Macon today after a three days' trip away from our training camp. We spent one day at Columbus, while we pastimed in Atlanta for two days. We will be kept busy during the rest of our stay here as is is not possible to get as much practice while on the road as it is when stopping at a single city for a long period. This is why a baseball club has a big advantage on some of its opponents if it has a large number of games scheduled for home during the early part of a pennant race. A club usually does not get going at top speed at the opening of a league campaign, but, if it is at home where it is able to have morning practice, it soon gets its stride and in many cases gets out in front before some of the teams which are on the road get going at their best clip.

We have been able to engage in plenty of practice while at Macon. The weather in the South this year has been colder than it was in 1914, but this has not retarded our work very much. We have been out in the park hustling every minute regardless of the weather. The pitchers, of course, have been forced to take things easy, but the rest of the gang has not worried much over the weather. Winning ball players seldom do.

* * *

There are some ball players who are always looking for an alibi and if the weather is not just right they start grumbling. They register a kick if it is cold, while they are also dissatisfied when Old Sol feels beating down upon the diamond in all of his well known glory. I have always gone out and played my best game regardless of whether it was hot or cold. I have always realized that it takes two clubs. With nine men on each side, to play a legal ball game and that the other fellow is forced to contend with the same difficulties as I am. It is then usually a case of the team with the most courage winning.

If I were forced to name a quality which every ball player who hopes to win fame must have, I would declare that he must have aggressiveness. The baseball player who is not a fighter has but little chance of having his name written in the Baseball Hall of Fame. Grit and courage play a prominent part in every business enterprise and in every line of athletics, but the man without an aggressive, never-say-die spirit does not show up as quick in any other place as he does on the ball field. If he lacks courage, his fellow players and the "fans" will soon realize his failing and he will have a difficult time retaining his position.

Courage and a great fighting spirit have been Johnny Evers' biggest assets. Without these traits, Evers would probably not be playing ball today. He has experienced many reverses and had more than his share of disappointments, but they never broke his spirit. He fought back with even greater force when all the world seemed against him and the result is that he is today hailed as one of the greatest ball players of all time. Evers is a human dynamo when he is on the diamond. He is fighting for everything in sight. He combines with his wonderful aggressiveness a bright, fast working brain which grasps a new situation in a fraction of a second. This makes an unbeatable combination.

Much of my recent success has been due to Evers. He has taught me many of the fine points of baseball which I did not know. Working side by side with him each day, I, too, have become a fighter and it pains me to lose a ball game. Johnny is a wonderful fellow during a game. If a player makes a "boner" play, he gives him a "call" while he is the first to pat the same man on the back if he later executes a dazzling play. Off the ball field, Johnny is a sympathetic, kind hearted person. But once the ball sounds for the start of a ball game, Evers is a typical fighter and keeps playing with all his great spirit until the battle has been won or lost.

* * *

Stallings is also a born fighter. With the aid of Evers, he has made the Braves a fighting ball team. There is not any place on our club for the man who quits when he encounters serious opposition. And, I am glad to say, that there is not a man on the club who is not supplied with an abundance of Spartan-like courage. I believe we owe it in a way that it plays a mighty prominent part in winning ball games.

Society Women Scored by Pastor

WORCESTER, March 29.—Champagne drinking parties conducted by young men and women, wholesale flirting, the smoking of cigarettes by high school girls and young society women, and the wearing of close-fitting dresses, were some of the things denounced by Rev. Leopold A. Nies, pastor of Trinity Church, in a Palm Sunday sermon, on the subject, "Is Modesty Among Women Dead?"

"A woman who has reached the age of forty-five can't be changed if she has become immodest."

MOTOR NOTES

By J. C. KERRISON.

Present indications are that Maine will as well as all of the Summer resort sections of New England, is to have one of the greatest seasons in its history so far as tourist traffic is concerned. Even at the present time inquiries are being received from every section of the county by the Touring Information Bureau of the Maine Automobile Association, at No. 12 Mounment square, Portland, and the Maine hotels report the heaviest bookings in their history. In many houses every room is taken for July and August.

So great has been the inquiry for road literature about Maine that the Maine Automobile Association is making every effort to issue its annual road book several weeks earlier than in previous years. An attempt will be made to have the book ready for distribution by April 1 and it is hoped that this may be done.

When Glands Swell Blood Needs Attention

Even a Sweat Gland May Result in Severe Consequence.

In our intricate body the use of S. S. S. for the blood has a most remarkable influence. We have learned our glandular system. It may be a tiny bulb no bigger than a pin point and yet if a disease germ gets into it, there is a tremendous swelling. It becomes a carbuncle, it may be a "blood rising," and it is often a source of continuous misery if not checked. Many of the most excruciating forms of torture begin with the swelling of a tiny gland, caused by a disease germ. And it is S. S. S. that spreads throughout the blood circulation to prevent just such conditions. Or if they have already started, S. S. S. will soon put the blood in such a state of health as to overcome the tendency to glandular swellings. It is a natural medicine for the blood, just as essential to health if the blood be impure, as are the meats, fats, grains and sugars of our daily food.

It contains one ingredient the active purpose of which is to stimulate the exchange of new flesh for dead or waste matter.

Get a bottle of S. S. S. today of any druggist, and if your case is stubborn, write to the Medical Adviser, The Swift Specific Co., 168 Swift Bldg., Atlanta, Ga. This department is in charge of a noted physician.

A Small Investment That Will Pay Big Dividends

It Was a Course of Instruction in Common Courtesy, and It Was Made by a Great Corporation

Copyright, 1915, by the Star Company.

Recently a big railroad company, at an expense of less than a hundred dollars, issued to its employes a card on which instructions in courtesy were printed in red and blue letters, in large clear type.

With the card were directions to tack it up in all stations, freight offices and other places where the patrons of the company come in contact with the public, so that the public may know just what the attitude of the railroad company is toward them.

The hundred dollars spent in printing and circulating this card will bring real returns to the railroad.

In the first place it will serve notice on the people that they will be treated politely, and people who expect to be politely treated are very likely to be polite themselves.

In the second place it will improve the conduct of the railroad employes, who are often gruff and short with the public—as any human beings would be likely to be after thousands of foolish questions had been asked them, and after dozens of short-tempered men had snapped at them through the ticket windows.

Politeness saves time and tempers. It makes people well disposed toward a corporation whose employes are polite. Naturally it increases the receipts of that corporation, for people will not long patronize any institution which permits them to be uncivilly used.

All travellers remember kindly the ticket agent who is patient and accommodating and is willing to go out of his way to supply information that it is really not his business to supply.

They remember with equal kindness the brakeman or conductor who is willing to answer questions civilly, and who seems to take an interest in matters unimportant to him, but very important, indeed, to the passengers.

The ticket agents are the salesmen of the railroad, and the first requisite of good salesmanship is courtesy.

The brakemen and conductors merely operate the train, but they can, by politeness, help to satisfy the purchaser of a ticket with the goods he has bought—that is, the ride over the road.

Together they create in the mind of the passenger an impression of the railroad, and on that impression the improvement of the railroad's business depends.

In the stores it is the patient, kindly, polite salesman or saleswoman to whom a customer returns again and again, and whose book shows the biggest business at the end of the day.

The entries in that book spell advancement to the one who carries it. In the main office of the store, in the big positions, you will find the men and women who are there because they early learned the value of politeness.

It is a cheap, an easy and a sure way to success, providing always that there is intelligence behind it—and there usually is.

The general public has little understanding of the nerve strain of those who deal with crowds of customers. They make no allowances for the impolite or rude employe. They turn naturally to the one who is polite.

And the polite man soon discovers that his politeness breeds politeness. Just as the polite customer gets better treatment than the "snappy" one, so the polite salesman does more business than the uncivil one.

Good feeling and mutual respect are promoted all round.

The example set by this big corporation is one that ought to be followed by all corporations dealing with the public. And, incidentally, if it was followed by the public, shopping, whether for dry goods or railroad tickets, would be much less wearing on the human system.

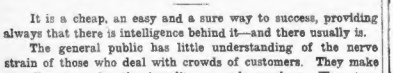
More Truth Than Poetry

By JAMES J. MONTAGUE

There Ain't No Such Animal

THE sad commuter now appears with bundles fastened to his ears,
With rakes and hoes tied to his clothes,
His shoulders bent with bundles.
His pockets full of apple trees, beneath his hat a hive of bees;
He scatters seeds as he proceeds
And a lawn mower he trundles.
At least that's how the artists draw him—
As for myself, I never saw him.

HE rises at the break of dawn and tills the soil and mows the lawn
And sets out plants and chases ants
And bugs in sun or rain.
He gets a bite to eat at four, then weeds and hoes three hours more;
But when half done he has to run
To catch the city train.
That's how the jokesmiths write about 'em—
But for myself, I rather doubt 'em.



Unnecessary Effort

A means has been found of making Connecticut tobacco grow bigger, but no one can be found to justify any such proceeding.

It Just Comes Kinda Nachrel

The Dawn of Equality

Men can cook, make dresses, trim hats, wait on the table, teach school, and do housework successfully. And recently we saw a story called "The Diary of a Successful Wife" by Frederick Arnold Hummer.

Great Mysteries of Nature and Science

By GARRETT P. SERVISS

"DISCUSSING recently with a friend many topics of a problematical nature, my friend brought up a question which I would like to have you answer, as we are disagreed. Take, for instance, a cannon which will shoot a cannonball with the velocity of sixty miles an hour. Now mount this cannon on the head of a locomotive traveling sixty miles an hour. If the cannon be fired while the train is in full motion will the cannonball leave the mouth of the cannon?—O. A. L., Chicago."

Yes, the ball would leave the cannon with a speed of sixty miles an hour, with reference to the head of the locomotive, but it would travel one hundred and twenty miles an hour with reference to the ground. It is already traveling sixty miles an hour while it is yet lying in the cannon, and the impulse given to it by the powder simply adds another sixty miles an hour to its motion. If the cannon stood beside the track and was fired at the instant when the head of the locomotive came up with it, then the ball (neglecting the effect of air resistance), would just keep abreast of the locomotive, because each would have the same velocity.

If you reverse the case and suppose your cannon fired from the rear end of the train, then the cannonball and the train would separate at the rate of sixty miles an hour, the forward motion of the ball (with the train) being exactly neutralized.

All of these problems depend upon Newton's "laws of motion," which experience has proved to be correct. The thing to remember is that if a body in motion has more motion in the same direction imparted to it, velocity is added to that which it already possesses, but the original motion in no way or degree subtracts from the effect produced by the added motion.

If this were not so a falling body would not continue to increase its velocity. The force of the earth's attraction, or gravity, is sufficient to cause any body falling near its surface to acquire a velocity of about thirty-two feet during each second that it continues to fall. If you should tumble from the top of the Woolworth tower in New York, you would descend sixteen feet during the first second, and at the end of that second you would be plunging downward with a velocity of thirty-two feet per second. During the next second you would acquire an additional velocity of thirty-two feet, making sixty-four in all, and the distance that you would have fallen during those two seconds would be sixty-four feet. During the third second your total velocity would be increased to ninety-six feet, while the distance fallen in three seconds would be 144 feet. Supposing the whole height to be 676 feet, you would be about six and a half seconds in reaching the pavement, and you would strike with a velocity of about 208 feet per second, quite sufficient to destroy all interest in terrestrial mathematics.

"If a cannon were fired from a boat in the ocean, and the cannon were made level by the use of a spirit level, would the bullet, if it had power to go on without loss of speed, or change of course whatever, finally hit the crest? How is an object made level?—R. R. W., Colchester, Ill."

If you mean by "the crest" the horizon, or the line where the sky seems to meet the sea, then the projectile would not touch it, but would pass above it, at a height depending upon the distance of the horizon, which, in turn, would depend upon the elevation of your eye above the sea level. A common rule for finding the distance of the horizon at sea, or on a level prairie, is this: To the height of your eye, in feet, add half that height, and take the square root of the sum: the result will be the distance in miles. This rule gives for a height of six feet a horizon distance of three miles. A cannonball fired on a level, from a height of six feet, would pass about twelve feet above the horizon, situated three miles away.

If the cannon could be supposed fired in such a way that the ball would just skim the surface of the water in starting on its straight course, then at a distance of one mile from the starting point it would be about eight inches above the surface; at three miles its height would be six feet, and at twelve miles ninety-six feet. Its course would be a "tangent," which is a line touching the circumference of a circle at a right angle to the radius at that point, a radius being a straight line from the centre of a circle to any point on its circumference. The plumb line shows the direction of the earth's radius at any place. What we call a level is a line, or plane, lying in a tangent to the earth's surface, or parallel to such tangent, and consequently at a right angle to radius or the direction of the plumb line. The spirit level is the handiest instrument for determining a level.

A READER of this column, who signs herself "A Sad Woman," has asked the following questions and requested answers through the columns of this paper.

"Two doctors have advised me to undergo an operation for cancer; my uncle claims that Christian Science can cure me.

"QUESTION ONE. Which shall I follow?

"QUESTION TWO. If, as the doctors say (unknown to them I unintentionally overheard), I cannot live more than a year, how shall I prepare my spiritual being for the next life? What books shall I read? What attitude toward life (what remains of it) and the future existence shall I hold?

"Surely you can appreciate what state of mind I am in and aid me as soon as possible.

"I am very poor. Aside from my sickness and poverty I long to live, for I am young and life is full of promise if I recover. If I cannot, I earnestly desire to be brave—to face the ordeal and study very hard for the astral life so soon to be entered."

Power of the Mind

NOW AS TO QUESTION NUMBER ONE. The writer of this article is not a Christian Scientist, but she is a believer in the idea of the power of mind to control the body and to change environment and do away with obstacles to health, happiness and prosperity. This law was taught by the Vedas five thousand years before Christ. In those remarkable old works may be found whole sets of laws for the healing of the body by the power of the mind.

Christian Science, New Thought, the Emanuel Movement, Divine Science and many other metaphysical cults have done and are doing much to make the world understand this great old law.

There is only one Thing in the universe. Everything we are or have is a reflection of that one Thing which we call God. That great creative Power is all light, health, opulence. He who keeps his mind filled absolutely with this consciousness can overcome all adverse conditions in this life. But it is difficult to keep the mind so filled. As wrong thinking of centuries has led to wrong doing, and wrong eating, and wrong talking, it is not an easy matter to overcome the conditions which have been produced by these mental processes. That it can be done, that it HAS been done in thousands of instances, is unquestionable. The proofs are everywhere at hand.

The writer of this article does not believe very much in the efficacy of surgical operations. Violet and X-rays have been known in innumerable cases to cure malignant maladies which have been pronounced incurable by the old school of physicians. Radium is also curing many such cases.

ANSWER TO QUESTION NUMBER TWO. This body is but one of several bodies which each individual possesses. The dissolution of this body no more means the end of life than the shedding of the skin of the snake or the dropping of the cocoon means death to the creatures which have inhabited them. When we take care of the body we are simply keeping in good order the box containing our jewels.

Love in Heart

The attitude for one who believes that the time is near when this outer body will be left behind is the march toward Infinity should be that of loving, joyful, serene expectancy. Love and sympathy for all those who are on earth should fill the heart, and a careful watch should be set upon the thoughts and the words and the actions, to prevent any phase of selfishness from marring the last months of life.

Many invalids are selfish, and in their sufferings they forget to show thoughtfulness or consideration of those in possession of health. A general retrospective view of one's life may be given with excellent spiritual results. Whenever we look back upon the past and recognize our faults and errors, and realize the wisdom of taking a different course of action under similar circumstances, we make a step forward toward a higher spiritual plane.

Every thought is a mosaic entering into the mansion which we are building for the occupancy of the spirit after we pass on.

A New Adventure

Death is but a wonderful new adventure for the aspiring soul. It means a finer body, a larger outlook and increased possibilities of usefulness for those who have developed the spiritual side of their natures. It means the passing from sphere to sphere and plane to plane until the experiences in those intervening realms have been absorbed and utilized, and then it means the reincarnation of the ego and the return to earth in a new form to carry out whatever hopes and ideals were left unfulfilled in this life.

"There is no death, there are no dead."
From zone to zone, from sphere to sphere,
The souls of all who pass from here
By hosts of living thoughts are led;
And, dark or bright, those souls must tread
The paths they fashioned year on year.
For hells are built of hate or fear,
And heavens of love our lives have shed.
Across unatlassed worlds of space
And through God's mighty universe,
With thoughts that bless or thoughts that curse,
Each journeys to his rightful place.
O, greater truth no man has said:
"There is no death, there are no dead."

It lifts the mourner from the sod
And bids him cast away the reed
Of some uncomforting poor creed
And walk with knowledge for a rod.
It bids the doubter seek the broad,
Vast fields, where living facts will feed
All those whose patience proves their need
Of these immortal truths of God.

It brings before the eyes of faith
Those realms of radiance, tier on tier,
Where our beloved "dead" appear,
More beautiful because of "death."
It speaks to grief: "Be comforted;
There is no death, there are no dead!"

TO YOU

By ANN LISLE

NO tie of kinship holds us—
No bond we could not end,
But still my spirit calls to you
And names you Friend—Dear Friend.
I reach to you across the space
Where mind and spirit blend;
And from the strength that molds your face
Comes power to be your friend.

While tenderness of giving
And love I dare not spend,
Stir vaguely in my heart for you,
Who call me but your friend.
No other tie could hold us so
As this—so fain to end,
My heart for you with love could glow—
You call me Friend—Dear Friend.

I did not know it, dear, at first;
I never guessed love's trend,
With mind and dreams and spirits knit
I thought to be—but friend.
And tho' all life deny me bliss,
Unwanted love I spend;
My spirit still thanks God for this—
You call me Friend—Dear Friend!
